The "Necessary" Evil. EDITORS APPEAL-The APPEAL of the welfth contains two articles pregnant with effection. The first is the statement that two young men in Cleveland, Ohio, John O'Leary and Daniel Cash, stupefied with beer two female children, aged ten and eleven years, for the purpose of violating their per sons. They were caught in the act, tried be fore the police court and sentenced to pay the deliciously cool at night, and is a charming place to visit and spend a few hours.

The park is enormous fine of twenty dollars an I costs. In the next column is the other article, viz The grand jury's report on the social evil The grand jury's report on the social evil, from which we learn that men believe it a "necessary evil." Necessary to whom?

Surely not to the female part of the evil, for the female part suffer untold pains and pen-alties, as well as unmeasured degradation. It not "necessary" to women, we must conclude the grand jury thought it necessary to ts own sex. Now, in view of this "necessi and also in view of the fact that stupefy ing young girls on beer and abusing their persons, is one of the many ways men take to recruit the prostitute class, instead of be ing surprised at the small fine of twenty dolars imposed on young men for starting two children on that "necessary" business, we may rather wonder why that men-managed police court thought it necessary to impose any fine at all on those nice young men. If social evil business is a "necessary ness, then it is a useful business, and if a usebusiness, then it is a right business. Whatever is useful is right. Can this logic be rights of the several States of the Union half | served in laborers working out of doors, algainsaid, if it is necessary, useful and right, in the name of common sense and justice, why will men how at these unfortunate creatures for doing what men urge them to do the direct tures for doing what men urge them to do the direct tures for doing what men urge them to do the direct tures for doing what men urge them to do the direct transfer and the direct transfer and the direct transfer and the states be defrauded of their rays of the sun. ners are the very ones who drag them to jail, and lock them in, and impose their fines. Can anything be more monstrously mean than this? Can anything more hideously unjust be conceived? The grand jury discountenances this method, and proposes another no whit less oppressive, and which will equal-ly fail to result in good. This other plan is no whit less oppressive, and which will equally fail to result in good. This other plan is to drive the women back from the public to drive the women back from the women back from the women back from the wo streets, set apart a certain locality for them, what shall be done with the male portion of our community which engages in this social evil business. Indeed, from this report one might imagine men have nothing to do with this evil, that only women are engaged in it. Are our grand jurymen so innocent of knowledge of human nature as not to know what every boy and girl of twelve must know, ely, that it takes the two sexes to make this dreadfully evil thing; that it is utterly impossible for women, all by themselves, to evening's programme, and an excellent to make a prostitute class, or to make a prostitute propound a few queries to the grand jurymen, to discover what he believed to be streams of talk of this evil in which so many more men realize the fact that it takes two human beings, male and female, to make prostitutes, male partners in vice were often their judges and executioners. Christ hated that unjust aw, and in many ways showed his pity and law on the same plane. When the Pharisees ry T. Ellett. carried to him the woman taken in sin and asked if he approved of stoning her to death, Christ commanded that only the innocent man should cast stones at the sinning woman. Are the twelve jurymen in that sinless state? Can they lay their hands on their hearts and affirm before God that according to this Christly test they are fitted to cast stones at the sinning women of this city? If they cannot, by what right, human or divine, can they recommend that these women be driven from the public street, penned up in one spot, and taxed? If unchaste women are to be men also be taxed. It unchaste women and an army of police set to guard and beat back with clubs and staves these unfortunate creatures, should they for a moment forget that they have no more rights than a dumb brute, and stray beyond these inclosures; in made her careless and reckless as she went sliding rapidly around the short turn in the same vices be subjected to the same treatment. Does it ever occur to men to consider who are these women so scorned and downtrodden? Whence come they? Who are their fathers, their mothers? Are they of women are of our own race and kin and color They are born of christian parents, baptized borrow half of the fund at a heavy rate of earth?) yet men have less feeling for them tread them deeper in the mire of degradation. Since men have so signally failed in every hope will, if put in practice, knock the bot-tom out of the evil at one blow. I respectfully submit this plan to the thought ful attention of the mayor and city council he social evil business a woman shall be staned-a woman of the cast iron sort, whose age, piety and courage fit her for the position. Phis woman shall have a desk and a large blank book, and shall record in the book the full name of every male visitor, his age, busi iess, residence and condition in life, whether married or single, sick or diseased, whether a member of any church or not, and of what church. These books must be the property of the city, open to the inspection of ever citizen. The cast-iron book-keeper must make a monthly report of the number of said vistors, giving the names thereof, which report shall be published in the daily papers. Should the mayor, city council and grand jury ap prove of this plan and put it to trial, if it does not knock the very bottom out of the licentiousness that is corrupting the body politic, the present writer has another plan that is worthy of trial, for the present writer has no faith in that "necessary" doctrine propounded by the grand jury; on the contrary he believes with the advanced scientist philosophers and physiologists, who deny the "necessity" plea, and hold that if men are taught to govern their coarse animal propensities it is better for them; that indul gence increases the power of the passions; that self-government decreases, and self-govern learn it as long as they arrogate the right to punish, scorn and despise women, who are no worse than themselves. FAIR PLAY.

State Rights. EDITORS APPEAL—It is amusing to note the interest the Avalanche and most other "I have prescribed Colden's Liebig's liquid Drinking alcoholic house late him on his first-born, being a boy of Republican journals begin to manifest about extract of beef and tonic invigorator, and the security of State rights.
